Suggestions for democratic reform in hkong

Make election of CE by

-have a group of 8-10 candidates already approved by Beijing and then have voting from the functional constituency candidates or universal suffrage

-now the 800 memebers voting for CE are not repretative of Hk peoples aspirations

-develop a functioning opposition party with shadow ministers like Australia

-use HK success in reform to reunify Taiwan and implement reforms in mainland China

- limited democracy is the key to prosperity and stability in Hong Kong and China
- the basic Law must be followed with liberal interpretation

Im afraid that if insufficient reforms are made, social stability in HK will deteriorate and the international community will reduce its support for China-even considering sanctions. Is this in the interest of the country?
