Subject: Patriotism

To people like me, a Malaysia citizen residing in HK, the talk of patriotism lately seems really amusing. When more than 10% of the local residents (as many suggested) are holders of foreign passports, you really do not expect them to be patriotic and love Communist China. Patriotism, really, the love of which countries are you talking about?

Take for example Mr. C H Tung and Mr. Li La Shing. To the best of my knowledge, their children, children-in-law and grandchildren, are all (at least mostly) foreign passport holders. They better ask their children to renounce their foreign citizenship in public and embrace Chinese citizenship before preaching others on patriotism (i.e. love of Communist China). Show us how patriotic you really are.

How can you convince others if you cannot even convince your own children? Don't tell me that foreign passports are only travel documents for them. I really look down on people who have such thought.

Ciao.
